A Consecration Ceremony May Lead to a Church Hearing.

Prelates Who Assisted in the Conse cration of the Right Rev. Heber Weller, Jr., Reply to Implied Criticisms of Their Presiding Officer.

NEW YORK, April 17 .- The seven bish ops who took part in the consecration last November of the Rev. Heber Weller, in as Bishop Coadjutor of the Diocese of Fond du Lac, Wis, resent the implied crit-icism of Bishop Clark, the Presiding Offier of the House of Bishops, in regard to ne ceremony incident to the consecration eferred to, and demand a trial according uch a hearing would prove one of th such a hearing would prove one of the most imposing and interesting in the his-tory of the church in America. The bone of contention appears to have been found in the character of the vestments worn by the prelates taking part in the convocaon ceremonies, Bishop Cark, of Rhode land, deeming it proper to make a public sclaimer of responsibility therefor. The llowing is his disclaimer:

"Bishop's House, Providence, R. I.
"As the recent consecration of the Bisho Coadjutor of Fond du Lac was held unrefte authority of the commission signed ad scaled by me as Presiding Bishop of the Church. I feet myself called upon to sclaim any responsibility for the violaon of the rubries on that occasion and te introduction of vestments having no uthority of use in the Church.

"THOMAS M. CLARK,
"Presiding Bishop."

icturesque consecration ceremony did not ke the action of Bishop Clark. They were uite willing that none of the responsi oility should rest on him, but they disgreed entirely with the view that any responsibility could possibly have rested on him. They take exception to his calling himself the Presiding Bishop of the Church, since, to their mind, it smacks of an assumption of authority over them which they will not for one moment alwhich they will not for one moment al-low and which they vigorously repudiate. These seven bishops involved are Wil-liam E. McLaren, Bishop of Chicago; C. Grafton, Bishop of Fond du Lac; Isaac Lea Nicholson, Bishop of Milwaukee; G. Mott Williams, Bishop of Marquette; Joseph M. Francis, Bishop of Indiana; Arthur L. Williams, Bishop Coadjutor of Nebraska, and Charles P. Anderson, Pishop Co-adjutor of Chicago. These prelates have just sent a letter to Bishop Clark stating their case, assum-ing full responsibility for the consecration ceremony, demanding a trial on the charges that they transgressed the can-onical law, and expressing a willingness o abide by any decision given if they are ound fulltyland. Their lefter says in part:

"We unhesitatingly accept and approve your disclaimer of responsibility, because, as we propose to show, no responsibility rested upon you as presiding bishop in connection with the consecration at Fond du Lae, after you had sent the commission to those who consecrated the bishop coadjutor-elect.

"We would have asked your attention to this fact, as well as to other portions of your letter, at an earlier date, had we not resolved to refrain from doing so until chamor had abated, and until that broad, tolerant, and inclusive spirit which was characteristic of the Reformation settlement, and is so necessary to the peace and growth of the Church, had resumed sway.

"The heading of your letter announces it to be an 'official communication.' Although addressed to the public and not to us, its reference to ourselves, as well as the character of its averments, compels us to take respectful notice of it, with every assurance of our fraternal regard for yourself as a brother in the episcopate, but with profound surprise that you should have formed and expressed opinions concerning the consecration of a bishop coadjutor at Fond du Lac (which opinions reflect upon seven of your brethren), without such direct and plenary information touching our action, individual of collective, as could easily have been secured by you, in order to possess such a measure of knowledge as would have made an impartial opinion practicable.

"For reasons which will presently appear, we cannot recognize you, our much revered brother, as holding any archiepiscopal or judicial relation to our action; nor do we propose in this letter to offer any plea, positive or negative, to the charges mentioned in your communication—which is something we shall continue to decline to do until the only authority which is invested with the right to do so shall call upon us to plead guilty or not guilty. In making this statement, we disavow any desire to conceal our action; we simply decline to offer any plea whatever in the face of charges of conceal our action; we simply decline to offer any plea whatever in the face of charges.

constitutional methods without clothing any functionary with powers that simulate papalism.

"That the consecration at Fond du Lacwas consummated 'under the authority of the commission signed and sealed by me' (you) is true; but permit us to remind you that you did not act as 'Presiding Bishop of the Church' in sending that commission. The canon under which you acted designates you as 'the Presiding Bishop of the House of Bishops,' and this title is frequently applied to that functionary. It is therefore evident that the title is not 'Presiding Bishop of the Church,' since no such title or office exists by provision of law, but is 'Presiding Bishop of the House of Bishops."

"With reference to the powers which the constitution and capons confer upon the Presiding Bishop of the House of Bishops, we beg very respectfully to suggest that no powers are conferred except those which are distinctly specified, and these mostly involve clerical duties only, and the consecration of a bishop lies in the House of Bishops considered in solidum, and when their presiding officer acts he acts for them. Their primary and plenary authority passes to him and to two other bishops whom he may select; but to him and to them, only as agents of the House. There can be no presiding bishop until the House meets at the next General Convention, and his specified duties are to be discharged by one who is not yet presiding bishop. It is evident, therefore, that no duties devolve on the presiding bishop by virtue of any power dwelling in him as an intrinsic possession, and that his duties and privileges are only such as may be distinctly specified in the written laws of the Church. Since then there is not a word nor a line of our statusory laws which clothes the Presiding Bishop of the House of Bishops with an iota of episcopal authority in any other diocese than his own, and since his duties outside of his diocese are clerical only (unless he himself consecrates a bishop-elect, or exercises episcopal authority over what are called foreign churches) we must he himself consecrates a bishop-elect, or exercises episcopal authority over what are called foreign churches), we must perforce look upor the communication to which we are referring as expressing only the private opinions of the Bishop of Rhode Island, which Beyond cavil or doubt, the Bishop of Rhode Island enjoys the right to held and to express.

"But, dear brother, deep as is our affection for you, we cannot recognize those opinions as having any canonical authority in the Church, or any mandatory force for your fellow-diocesans. It is your privilege to hold the views expressed in your letter, but it is our duty firmly to refuse to them any 'official' character, and to express regret that a brother diocesan should have given us reason to compilain of the manner in which his opinions were published to the world. And this we feel doubty impelled to do, lest your action, no doubt inadvertently taken, may seem to establish a precedent to be quoted hereafter as justifying possible future assumptions of quasi-metropolitical authority without any basis of canonical law. But we are not disposed to shirk resposibility for any action we may have taken, under the pleathat you as 'the Presiding Bishop of the House of Bishops' were not authorized to disclaim any resposibility for the violation of the rubrics on that occasion, and the introduction of vestments having no authority of use in the Church.' On the contrary, we hold ourselves responsible to our peers acting under the canon law, and not to any other tribunal on earth. Disciaming the spirit or attitude of challenge, we hold ourselves in readiness to accept any process of trial provided by the canons, and may we be permitted to add that we are still further ready in all humility and obedience to accept such judicial sentence as may be pronounced upon us in case after due process we are found guilty of any offence against the rubrical or canonical law of the Church." ercises episcopal authority over whe called foreign churches), we mu

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL.

The President and Mrs. McKinley and their invited guests to the number of about thirty, including several members f the Cabinet, were entertained at the White House last night by the singing of Miss Katharine Pelton, of New York, who has been visiting in the city for some days. Miss Pelton is the daughter of the late E. R. Pelton, of New York, the well-known publisher and the owner of the "Eclectic Magazine," which publica-tion Miss Pelton edited for some time. She had the advantage of the best mu-sical training in this country, and then spent three years under European teachers, after which she appeared in concert in London, where she met with great success. Since her return from Europe she has appeared a few times in New York and Brooklyn and has received very high praise from the musical critics of the metropolis. She made her appearance in this city for the first time at the White House last night, where she delighted her hearers. She sang the President's favorite ballad. "Away Down Upon the Suawanee River," in a way that elicited the enthusiastic praise of those present. Miss Chickering, of Washington, accompanied her on the piano. The President and Mrs. McKinley presented Miss Pelton with a bouquet of exquisite roses.

The marriage of Miss Zue Hunte Brockett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Brockett, to Mr. Clarence Sylvester McLean, of Rochester, N. Y., took place last night at 8 o'clock at the family resi dence, on Holmead Avenue northwest. Miss Helen Hume played Mendelssohn's wedding march, to which the bride, es corted by her father, entered the first drawing-room. Her gown was of white bride, was maid of honor, and handsomely made gown of pink crepe de chine and carried Bridesmaid roses. After chine and carried Bridesmaid roses. After the ceremony a reception was held, about 150 guests attending. A collation was served from a prettily appointed table, where pink was the color scheme. Mr. and Mrs. McLean left for Rochester later in the evening, and will make that city their home.

OBITUARY.

Joseph Smith Bryce, the oldest living graduate of West Point, died suddenly at 3:30 o'clock yesterday morning in his room in the Fifth Avenue Hotel, New York. He was born in Georgetown, D. C., in 1808, and was graduated at the United majority was over 1.500 States Military Academy in the class of 1829. Gen. Robert E. Lee, the Confederate Commander-in-Chief, stood No. 1 in this time after his graduation, and then went to New York, where he entered the law office of Albert Gallatin, afterward Secre-tary of the Treasury. He practiced law until the beginning of the civil war, when mission as major. He joined the staff of General Wadsworth as adjutant general.

After a year he was assigned to the staff of General Barnard, and while serving under him assisted in the preparation of the defences of Washington. At the end of the war Major Bryce went abroad and traveled extensively. In 1843 he married Elizabeth, the daughter of John L. Stevens. Three children were Bryce, and a daughter who is now Mrs. Nicholas Fish and was the mother of Hamilton Fish, who was killed while serving with the Rough Riders at Santi-

Mr. Bryce had lived at the Fifth Ave nue Hotel for four years. Last winter he was ill from pneumonia aid he never recovered entirely. On Monday evening he went to bed, apparently in his usual health. He awoke at 3:30 o'clock and asked his attendant what the hour was, what the day of the week and the day of the month. Then he asked for a cigar. His nurse demurred to the cigar, but Mr. Bryce said that he would like to smoke and sat up in his bed. As the ourse handed the cigar to him he fell back and died almost instantly. Rev. Justin D. Fulton, D. D., who had forty-seven years, died at his home in Somerville, Mass., Monday, aged seventy-three years. He was born in Earlville, N. Y., and married Mrs. Laura Whipple, of New York, the daughter of a deacon of the Tabernacle Baptist Church. Dr.

Fulton was regarded as the leader of the anti-Catholic movement in America. He lectured for many years, his favorite theme being "The Annihilation of the Ro-man Church." Mrs. Mary Norton Bradford, well known n New England as a poetess, died at her ome in Roxbury, Mass., Monday. She was born at Gromwell, Conn., and educated at New Haven and was distinguished for her scholarship. Her poetic talent did not develop until after the death of her husband, Joseph Bradford, a journalist, which occurred in 1886, when she began
